Boldt Castle, on Heart Island, was to be the testimony of the unsurpassed love of a man for his wife. The magnificence of the structure was to be equaled only by George Boldt's adoration of Louise, who was the love of his life and reason for the construction of such an elaborate summer home.

George C. Boldt came to America in 1864 from Prussia, the son of poor parents. A man of tremendous organizational skill, daring and imagination, he became the most successful hotel magnate in America managing and profit sharing the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, as well as the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He was the president of several companies, a trustee of Cornell University, and the director of the Hotel Association of New York. Boldt Castle stands as an eternal monument to the memory of the man whose dreams were no more far-reaching than his capabilities.
